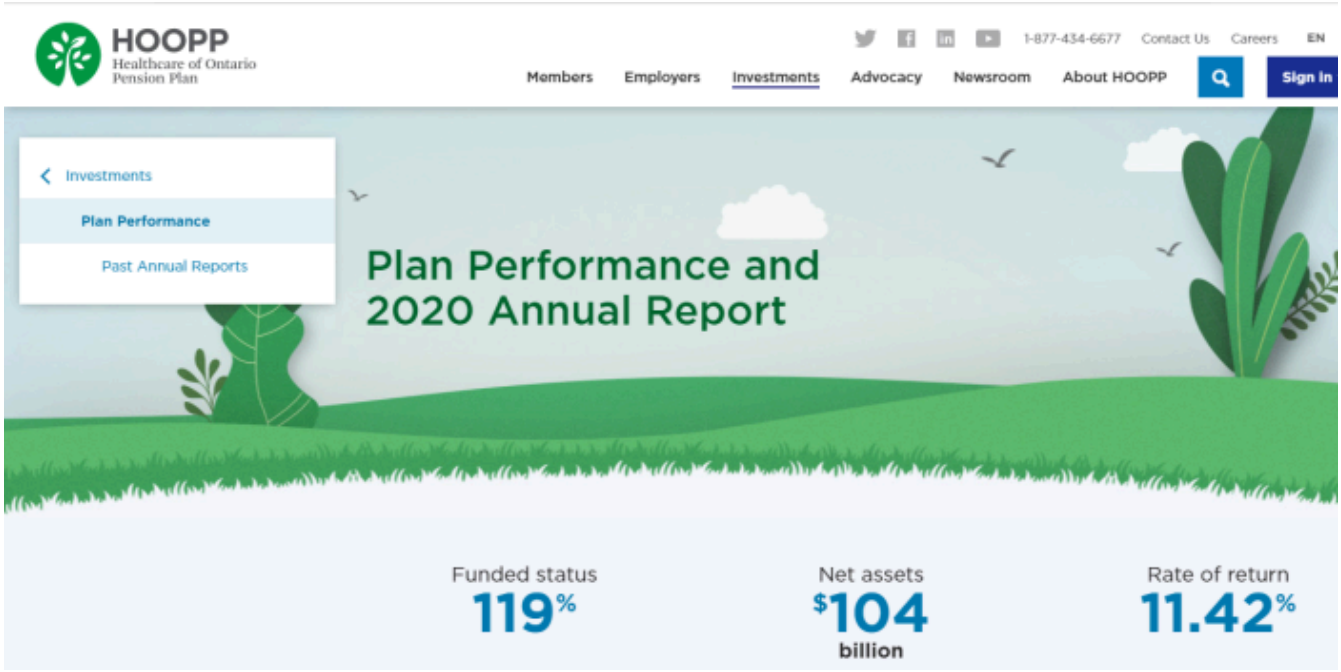
Healthcare Of Ontario Pension Plan (HOOPP) Owns Stock In Vaccines & Masks Being Pushed



The Ontario Science Table lists groups in the health care sector as its partners. Whether or not the individual members support this, and to what extent, the pensions of a lot of people are tied up in promoting their agenda.

HOOPP, the Healthcare of Ontario Pension Plan has some interesting medical holdings. This is at least according the SEC, or U.S. Securities and Exchanges Commission. While there is nothing inherently bad in investing in your own field, it will be driven by the way you want it to go.

The fund claims to have over $100 billion in net assets, or equity. Fair enough, let's take a look at where some of that money is.

COMPANY	AMOUNT
1Life Healthcare	$540,000
3M Co.	$462,000

Alexion Pharmaceuticals	$34,891,000
Alnylam Pharmaceuticals	$213,000
Alpha Healthcare Acquisition Corp	$2,232,000
Amplitude Health Care Acquisition	$930,000
Bausch Health Cos	$2,366,000
Biogen Inc.	$235,000
CVS Health Corp	$32,871
Cytomx Therapeutics Inc.	$835,000
Deerfield Healthcare Technology Acquisition	$2,696,000
DFP Healthcare Acquisition	$3,633,000
Gilead Sciences	$6,420,000
HCA Healthcare	$142,000
Healthcare Merger Corp.	$1,019,000
Jazz Pharmaceuticals PLC	$3,538,000
Johnson & Johnson	$34,401,000
Livongo Health Inc.	$6,169,000
Merck & Co.	$6,221,000
Pfizer	$38,467,000
Regeneron Pharmaceuticals	$1,052,000

The individual companies weren't named in the HOOPP paperwork, so a visit to the SEC was needed for that. For reference, Gilead is the manufacturer of Veklury, also known as Remdesivir, a drug (not a vaccine) to counter Covid-19. It was given interim authorization to be used in Canada. Janssen (which is owned by Johnson & Johnson) also has an authorized "vaccine" in Canada. So does Pfizer, which is partnered with BioNTech. Yes, these are the same companies.

As for the next group, this is on the list of things that will make you go “hmmm”. If health care workers in Ontario were expecting, or wanting, a shutdown of society, these would be the companies to invest in.

A serious question: does it come across as a conflict of interest when health care workers are pushing pharmaceuticals which their pension plans own stock in? And it gets stranger.

Grid Dynamics Inc.	$4,676,000
Mastercard	$427,644,000
Microsoft Corp.	$298,081
Netflix	$335,000
Nike	$2,354

PayPal Holdings	$378,000

Starbucks	$11,065,000
Visa	$1,802,000
Walmart	$13,148,000
Zoom Communications	$216,000

HOOPP seems to be investing in everything that we need in order to have a cashless society, working from home, and an abundance of pharmaceuticals. But that's probably just a coincidence.

While most of the profiles of the HOOPP leadership were privatized, a few were in the open. Some interesting details revealed in them.

Since 2005, HOOPP has been an investor signatory of CDP. CDP encourages investors, companies and cities to build a sustainable economy by measuring and understanding their environmental impact.

HOOPP claims to be pushing the ESG/green agenda pretty hard. So expect that they'll only be investing in such companies that "appear" to be green, regardless of whether or not they actually are green. They sing the praises about sustainability and climate change. Most people have heard it all before.

As for the HOOPP owning stock in these vaccines and masks, and their members pushing them on the public, that is downright shady, to say the least. True, it's the doctors and nurses themselves who market it to the lay person, but how does this look?

Is this ancient? According to the SEC, it covers the period up to December 31, 2020, and was filed on March 1, 2021. Now, it's possible that these shares have since been sold, but the first interim authorizations were coming out before then. Again, how does it look?
